

The Clarity Reflection

Seven honest questions. No score. Just a mirror.

For the Christian leader who's capable, busy — and quietly unsure the work is the right work.

Most capable people don't lack drive. They lack clarity — about what they're actually built for, who they're meant to serve, and whether the work is worth a life.

This is a short reflection, not a test. Nothing to fill in, nothing to score. Read each question slowly and notice what rises — the honest answer, not the impressive one. Where a question is hard to answer, that's not a failure. That's the place the light is trying to get in.

| You don't find clarity by thinking harder. You find it by answering truer.

The seven, walked in order

The order matters — each can only be answered once the one before it is settled. Read them as a sequence, not a menu.

1 Who is God?

Whose gaze do you actually live under — not the God you'd preach, the God your calendar believes in?

2 Who am I?

Not what you can sell. How were you made — what genuinely feeds you, and what drains you even when you're good at it?

3 Who do I serve?

Who reaches for you without being marketed to? Whose face is your work really for?

4 What do I do for them?

Does your offer flow from how you're wired — or did you just pick something you're good at and run?

5 How do I do it?

Is the work built to last, or does all of it still run through you?

6 What is the yield?

Does it bear real fruit — and have you honestly counted what it costs you to get it?

7 Why do I do it?

If it made a good living but God never said 'well done' over it — would it be enough?

Which one is you?

If the questions were hard to sit with, here's a shortcut to where the work is. Below are seven ways a capable life can feel off. Find the one or two that sound most like your life right now — then read across. That's the question quietly calling for your attention.

- ☐ Restless — “this isn't it,” with no obvious failure
→ Question 1. The work came unmoored from the One it's unto.
- ☐ Burned out despite real success
→ Question 2. Built on a competence that drains, not a gift that feeds.
- ☐ Busy, but not actually wanted
→ Question 3. Pushing an offer no one is reaching for.
- ☐ Spinning — can't get traction
→ Question 4. A thing in search of a person, or skill before wiring.
- ☐ Working flat out, but it all depends on you
→ Question 5. A real offer with no mechanism.
- ☐ Underearning — or “winning” but drained dry
→ Question 6. The harvest untested, or the cost never counted.
- ☐ Successful, but empty
→ Question 7. It converges — but the center was never named as worship.

If something stirred

These seven questions are the spine of the Avodah Discovery Workbook — a guided, self-paced walk through all seven in depth. You come out with your own Avodah Map: a named, one-sentence answer to what your work is, whom it's for, and why. It's the difference between noticing the fog and walking out of it.

Finish it, and you've earned a thirty-minute session with Joshua. Not a sales call. Not financial advice. Clarity, one person to another. And your copy carries a second seat — yours to give to a Confidant walking their own season.

The Avodah Discovery Workbook · $100

oneironnetwork.com/catalyst/clarity-sprint

Your reflections are yours. This page asks for nothing and stores nothing.

Offered for personal clarity, calling, and vocational reflection — not investment, legal, tax, financial, or real-estate advice. Joshua Wilson holds FINRA Series 79 and 63 licenses and Florida Real Estate Broker License No. BK3038350. © 2026 One Iron Network LLC.